On Thursday, February 9th, I shall be coming out to Langley in the afternoon, on official business.

Perhaps it would be sensible for me to stop by for a few minutes, so as to: (1) give you a copy of the introduction to my Intelligence and National Security bibliography; (2) obtain any reactions or criticisms of it, particularly of the critique of the section 21 literature and past CIA public relations practices; and (3) discuss with you possible dissemination policy, in view of proposals for its publication as (i) an occasional paper of Harvard's Center for International Affairs, or (ii) as a commercial press publication.

I'll telephone your office shortly after my plane reaches Washington, in case you'd be free for a short session late Thursday.

Sincerely yours,

William R. Harris
